Preparation for Your Research Presentations: The Readings
(Links due by email at the start of class on Monday, November 23, 2015)

On November 30, our first day back after the Thanksgiving Break and the start of our last two weeks of the semester, you will begin your research presentations to the class. These are ten-minute talks accompanied by PowerPoint slides (or their equivalent, as long as it works on our projection system) followed by about five minutes of questions from the class.

To prepare for these presentations, we need some online reading to place on our website. Please email to me a single web link for some resource relevant to your presentation topic. I need to receive this link by 8:00 a.m. on Monday, November 23. I will then place these links on our webpage so the class can refer to them before the presentations.

Over the Break I will sort out these links and make a schedule for the presentations to post online. As for now, everyone should be ready to present by November 30.
